HCI partners with Anheuser-Busch InBev to Provide Alcohol Service Training for 2010 FIFA World Cup South Africa™

Arlington, Virginia – May 14, 2010 - Health Communications, Inc. (HCI) today announced its partnership with Anheuser-Busch InBev, brewer of Budweiser, to bring alcohol server training to beer vendors at the 2010 FIFA World Cup South Africa™. Budweiser is the Official Beer of the 2010 FIFA World Cup.

HCI will conduct training sessions on May 17 and 18 in Johannesburg, South Africa, with Match Hospitality, FIFA's exclusive hospitality provider, as well as stadium General Managers and other concessionaires. The training program addresses concerns specific to large stadiums and also incorporates Anheuser-Busch InBev's high standards related to serving Budweiser. Through thought-provoking video clips that include legal information and information about how alcohol affects people, participants will be reminded to assess fans before each beer sale. The final section of the course challenges participants by having them apply intervention strategies learned from previous exercises.

"We are pleased to partner with Anheuser-Busch InBev to help ensure a positive, safe fan experience during the games," said Adam Chafetz, president and CEO of HCI. "This is just another example of how the world's leading brewer shows its continued commitment to not only brewing quality beers, but also to helping ensure they're enjoyed responsibly."

"Football and its global base of passionate fans are a perfect match for Budweiser and also allow us to bring a strong responsibility message to the games," confirmed Carol Clark, global vice president, Beer & Better World, Anheuser-Busch InBev. "We have worked with Health Communications for more than 25 years, and they make a great part of our team to help ensure Budweiser is sold and served responsibly."
